Hybrid threats: from geopolitics to internal security

Jean Mafart - 27 Jan 2026

Hybrid threats, which originate externally but have internal effects, are testing the European Union's ability to adapt its internal security policy. They blur the boundaries between internal and external security, between national and European competences, and encourage convergence with organised crime. The challenge is to develop a coherent, operational and coordinated response without diluting responsibilities.

■ Front page! :

Europe, the last obstacle for the coalition of autocrats.

Europe stands as the last bastion against a coalition of autocrats that is converging, from Moscow to Beijing and including certain illiberal tendencies in the United States, to weaken democracies. As recent tensions over Greenland have reminded us, Europe is founded on law, peaceful cooperation and the protection of individual freedoms. It embodies a unique moral and economic power capable of challenging the ambitions of authoritarian regimes. By asserting its historical values and consolidating its strategic credibility, the European Union can continue to offer a civilising alternative based on reason, respect for rights and stability, in the face of forces seeking to reshape the world through force or intimidation. New NextGenerationEU disbursements

On 22 and 23 January, the European Commission made the fourth payment of €175.4 million to Denmark and gave a positive assessment of the eighth payment request of €1.1 billion to Portugal under NextGenerationEU. Details of the recovery plan are available on the Foundation's website. Read more

■ European Council :

Informal meeting of the European Council

On 22 January, European Union leaders met to discuss transatlantic relations and their implications for the European Union. European Council President António Costa confirmed that Denmark and Greenland had the full support of the European Union and reiterated the Union's commitment to international law. He welcomed Donald Trump's reversal on new US tariffs on certain European countries and stressed that the EU was ready to work with the US on implementing the comprehensive peace plan for Gaza. ■ Commission :

New cybersecurity measures

On 20 January, the European Commission proposed new cybersecurity measures to strengthen the 2019 legislation in the face of growing threats. These include a revision of the Cybersecurity Regulation, which strengthens the security of supply chains, information and communication technologies, and more effective security testing through a renewed European cybersecurity certification framework. Finally, they strengthen the role of the European agency (ENISA) by establishing EU-wide cybersecurity skills certification systems. Read more

■ Parliament :

Referral to the Court regarding the agreement with Mercosur

On 21 January, MEPs adopted a resolution by 334 votes to 324, with 11 abstentions, requesting a legal opinion from the Court of Justice of the European Union (CJEU) on the trade agreement between the European Union and the Mercosur countries. This referral to the Court delays the European Parliament's vote on the ratification of this agreement. In the meantime, however, the European Commission has the option of applying the treaty provisionally if it so wishes. Read more - Other link

Air passenger rights

On 21 January, MEPs defended passengers' right to compensation in the event of a three-hour delay, while advocating for simplified refunds and free hand luggage. They also opposed reducing the current amounts of compensation paid in the event of flight disruptions and suggested that they be set between €300 and €600 depending on the flight distance. They called for the introduction of pre-filled forms for compensation and reimbursement claims so as to simplify the processing of claims. Read more - Other link

Harmonised rules for innovative businesses

On 20 January, MEPs adopted a resolution aimed at supporting innovative businesses in the European Union. They insisted on the establishment of a single, harmonised set of rules for the 28th regime, which proposes a pragmatic path towards a more integrated and competitive single market, in order to ensure a level playing field for businesses in the Union. The EU must strengthen its global partnerships and deterrence against threats

On 21 January, MEPs adopted two resolutions that marked a turning point in support for a genuine European Defence Union (EDU), prompted by Russia's continued aggression and the transactional shift in the US National Security Strategy 2025. Faced with this deteriorating environment, the European Union is now prioritising its strategic autonomy by establishing a new institutional architecture, including a Commissioner for Defence and Space and a permanent format for the Council of Defence Ministers. This ambition is supported by major financial levers such as the SAFE instrument, with €150 billion to support collaborative acquisitions, the 'ReArm Europe' plan and the EDIP programme, aimed at consolidating the European industrial and technological base. ■ Council :

European Parliament debate on the priorities of the Cypriot Presidency

On 20 January, MEPs debated the priorities of the Cypriot Presidency of the Council, as outlined by Nikos Christodoulides, President of the Republic of Cyprus. Many MEPs welcomed the focus on European autonomy, security and unity in a challenging geopolitical context. A number of them referred to the situation in Cyprus, the only EU Member State under military occupation, calling for renewed efforts to preserve territorial integrity and international law and to work towards the reunification of the island. Finally, others called for tighter border controls, effective returns and less red tape for businesses. Read more - Other link

Eurogroup meeting

On 19 January, the Eurogroup ministers of economy and finance discussed the appointment of the ECB Vice-President and approved the candidacy of Boris Vujčić, currently Governor of the Croatian National Bank. Bulgarian Minister Temenuzhka Petkova and representatives of the European Commission and the European Central Bank (ECB) briefed ministers on the progress of Bulgaria's transition to the euro. Meeting of Ministers for Economic Affairs and Finance

On 20 January, Ministers for Economic Affairs and Finance discussed the priorities of the Cyprus Presidency of the Council with a view to advancing legislative work on the savings and investment union, the agenda for tax relief and simplification, and a modernised customs union. They opened an excessive deficit procedure against Finland. Finally, they decided to provide additional macro-financial assistance of €500 million to Jordan to strengthen the country's economic stability. Read more

Informal meeting of Justice and Home Affairs Ministers

From 21 to 23 January, Justice and Home Affairs Ministers met in Nicosia to discuss how coordinated action by the EU and partnerships with third countries could improve overall results in terms of returns and strengthen the credibility of the EU's migration system. They emphasised the role of national practices and future EU information systems in enabling more targeted and better coordinated action, in full compliance with fundamental rights and the Schengen acquis. They discussed the need to strengthen asset recovery in an increasingly complex and rapidly changing financial landscape. They reiterated that 'following the money' remains one of the most effective tools for combating organised crime. Finally, they examined whether further Union action could lead to more effective cross-border restitution of cultural goods that have been unlawfully removed. Read more - Other link

■ Diplomacy :

Belgrade-Pristina dialogue on missing persons

On 22 January, the Joint Commission on Missing Persons met for the first time in Brussels. Its objective is to oversee the implementation of the Declaration on Missing Persons, adopted in May 2023, which aims to help shed light on the fate of missing persons and promote lasting reconciliation and peace. ■ European Agencies :

Unprecedented operation against synthetic drugs

On 21 January, Europol announced that it had conducted the largest operation ever carried out in the European Union against the production of synthetic drugs. The authorities dismantled 24 industrial laboratories and seized nearly 1,000 tonnes of chemicals, thereby depriving the market of hundreds of tonnes of drugs. In total, more than 85 people were arrested, including the two main leaders of the network. In addition to the arrests and seizures, the operation also led to the confiscation of more than 120,000 litres of toxic waste, which would probably have been dumped into the environment. ■ Bulgaria :

Resignation of President Rumen Radev

On 19 January, Bulgarian President Rumen Radev submitted his resignation to the Constitutional Court, becoming the first Bulgarian president to leave office before the end of his term. However, the head of state, who was elected in 2016, has not given up on politics and has announced that he will focus on upcoming political events, notably next spring's parliamentary elections, in which he plans to run and hopes to become Prime Minister. Vice-President Iliana Lotova will succeed him as head of state. Read more - Other link

■ Denmark :

Meeting between the British and Danish Prime Ministers

On 22 January, Keir Starmer, the British Prime Minister, welcomed his Danish counterpart Mette Frederiksen to Chequers. They discussed the importance of security in the Arctic for NATO and the need to strengthen cooperation between their two countries and within Europe on security matters, in particular by developing interoperability between military forces. They also discussed the war in Ukraine, the situation in Gaza and the issue of migration. Read more

The Arctic central to NATO's defence strategy

On 19 January, NATO Secretary General Mark Rutte welcomed Danish Defence Minister Troels Lund Poulsen and Greenlandic Foreign Minister Vivian Motzfeldt to Brussels to highlight the strategic importance of the Arctic and the island. Troels Lund Poulsen, and Greenland's Minister of Foreign Affairs, Vivian Motzfeldt, in Brussels to highlight the strategic importance of the Arctic and the island to the collective security of the Atlantic Alliance. With the region attracting increased geopolitical attention, the Allies renewed their commitment to strengthen presence and deterrence in the High North by stepping up investments in essential defence and surveillance capabilities, while exploring the possible establishment of a NATO mission in the Arctic. This meeting illustrates the joint commitment to preserving peace, stability and the shared interests of member countries in the face of contemporary security challenges. Read more

■ Kosovo :

In Kosovo, recount of votes cast in the snap parliamentary elections

On 19 January, Kosovo's Electoral Commission (CEC) decided to extend the recount of votes to all polling stations in the country, after having begun the process in 914 of them a week earlier. More than 68,000 ballots were allegedly misappropriated, transferring votes within the same lists to favour certain candidates, which should not however affect the initial result. Prizren prosecutor Petrit Kryeziu announced the arrest of 109 electoral commissioners for criminal offences of falsifying election results, coercion and intimidation, as well as active and passive corruption. ■ Studies/Reports :

Report on geo-economic fragmentation

On 22 January, the European Central Bank and the European Systemic Risk Board published a joint report on the dangers of geo-economic fragmentation. The institutions warn that global political instability could lead to tighter financial conditions and weaken economic growth within the European Union. The study reveals that geopolitical shocks are prompting banks to limit their lending, thereby reducing international diversification despite increased protection against external risks. To address these uncertainties, the authors recommend the adoption of a new supervisory framework and better harmonisation of statistical data. Read more - Other link
